Description:

Do human beings have moral obligations to the other animals? If so, what are they, and why? Should or could non-human animals have legal rights? Should we treat wild and domestic animals differently? Do human beings have the right to eat the other animals, raise them for that purpose on factory farms, use them in experiments, display them in zoos and circuses, make them race or fight for our entertainment, make them work for us, and keep them as pets? We will examine the work of utilitarian, Kantian, and Aristotelian philosophers, and others who have tried to answer these questions.

This course, when taken for a letter grade, meets the General Education requirement for Ethical Reasoning.

Sources and How to Get Them:

Many of the sources from we will be reading from onto the course web site, but you will need to have copies of Singer's Animal Liberation, Regan's The Case for Animal Rights, Mill's Utilitarianism and Coetzee's The Lives of Animals. I have ordered all the main books from which we will be reading (except my own book, which is not yet published) at the Coop.

The main books we will be using are:

Animal Liberation, by Peter Singer. Updated edition, 2009, by Harper Collins Publishers.

The Case for Animal Rights, by Tom Regan. University of California Press, 2004.

Fellow Creatures: Our Obligations to the Other Animals, by Christine M. Korsgaard. In manuscript, forthcoming from Oxford University Press.

Utilitarianism, by John Stuart Mill. Hackett Publishing Co., 2002.

The Oxford Handbook of Animal Ethics, edited by Tom L. Beauchamp and R. G. Frey. Oxford, 2011. I have ordered this book at the Coop. The Oxford Scholarship Online version of the Handbook is available to Harvard students at:
http://nrs.harvard.edu/urn-3:hul.ebook:GEN_5371963

Animal Rights: Current Debates and New Directions, edited by Cass Sunstein and Martha Nussbaum. Oxford, 2004. I have ordered this book at the Coop. The Oxford Scholarship Online version of the book is available to Harvard students at: http://nrs.harvard.edu/urn-3:hul.ebook:GEN_9780195305104

The Lives of Animals, by J. M. Coetzee. Princeton, 1999.

I have also ordered one recommended book, a good general introduction to the subject: Ethics and Animals: An Introduction. By Lori Gruen. Cambridge University Press, 2011.

All other works assigned and most recommended are on the course website.

Assignments and Grading Policies:

Papers: There will be three papers of about 8-10 pages or 2000-2500 words, to be turned in by 5:00 p.m. on Friday, October 13, Friday, November 17, and Thursday, December 14. In order to pass the course, you must turn in all three papers. (I will not average in failing grades for missing papers. If any paper is missing, you fail the course.) Papers must be submitted in a .doc or .docx format. Topics will be suggested. You may also write on a topic of your choice with the permission of your section leader. Extensions on the two midterm papers must be requested before the date on which the paper is due. Work that is late without an extension or beyond an extension will be discounted at the rate of one-third of a grade per day (A to A-, A- to B+, and so forth). No extensions will be granted on the final paper. If your paper receives a grade of B- or below for reasons other than lateness you may rewrite it for a higher grade under the guidance of your section leader. The three papers will count approximately equally, but active participation in section discussions and marked improvement in your written work will weigh in your favor.

Schedule of Readings and Assignments:

Note: All assignments that are not in Singer, Regan, Mill, or Coetzee are available on the course website, including the ones from The Oxford Handbook of Animal Ethics (OH) and Animal Rights: Current Debates and New Directions (AR), in the folder "Files." The schedule is tentative and subject to change.

Also Note: We will meet for lecture Friday September 1 for the convenience of shoppers but thereafter we will use the Friday slot for discussion section.
