Course Description: “Legalism” refers to rule-making, rule-following, and legal reasoning. This course considers the omnipresence of legalism in every aspect of our lives – from criminal due process to Harvard course requirements to the rules made and enforced by voluntary associations like the Boy Scouts. Public law is only one of many systems of rules under which we live. Our social universe is jurisgenerative.

The course invites students to explore the distinctive characteristics of legalistic modes of thought and the moral justifications offered for legalism. We will also consider a variety of moral objections to legalism and the power of romantic resistance to rule-making and rule-following. Legalistic practices and institutions – juries, university disciplinary committees, contracts, “truth commissions”, and others -- provide materials for reflecting on the use and misuse of rule-making and rule-following.

Course Requirements: There will be two take-home essay exams of approximately 6 pages. The first take-home exam will be passed out on February 24 and will be due on March 2 in class. The second take-home exam will be passed out on March 18 and will be due on March 25 in class. There will be a final exam covering material from Parts III and IV of the course.

Discussion sections: These are designed to give students an opportunity to raise questions about the meaning and relevance of the readings and lecture themes and to relate them to their own experiences as rule-makers and rule-followers.

Grading: Performance in discussion section will account for 20% of the grade; the two take-home exams will count for 20% of the grade each; the final exam will count for 40% of the grade.
